

Ultrasonographic and Endocrinological Characterization of Luteogenesis in Pregnant and Non-Pregnant Asian Elephants

Elephant reproduction is key to maintaining healthy populations and conserving the species. The Asian Elephant reproductive project will illuminate a very important part of the reproductive cycle and pregnancy maintenance, providing a better understanding of complex reproduction mechanisms, which are indispensable for management and breeding of elephants.